APPLETON'S

AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA

New Revised Edition

Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers on every subject. Illustrated with new type and illustrated with steel engravings and Maps.

The work, originally published under the title of "The New American Cyclopædia" was commenced in 1858, with a first issue the wide circulation which it has maintained ever since, and the success with which it has met the public wants have taken, place in every branch of science, literature, and art have induced the editors and publishers to undertake it on a more and thoroughly revised and in every a new edition entitled "The American Cyclopædia."

Within the last ten years great progress of discovery has taken place in the sciences, and in the arts which depend on the principles of science, and in the application of science to the purposes of war, and in the arts of peace, and in the development of industry, and in the diffusion of knowledge, and in the spread of civilization, and in the industrial and industrial activity, has been very marked.

Large accessions to our geographical knowledge have been made in the remotest quarters of the globe.

The political and social revolutions of the last decade, with the events resulting from them, have caused many important changes in the boundaries of nations, and in the fortunes of their men, whose names are in every mouth and whose lives are every one is eager to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought and important sieges maintained, of which the results have altered the political maps of the world. Important changes in the politics of the Old World which caused now so deeply to be felt, have taken place.

In preparing the present edition for the press, it has been the aim to bring the information down to the latest possible dates and to furnish an account of the most recent discoveries in science, of events from the most recent wars, of the most recent inventions, of the most recent discoveries in the arts, of the most recent statistics, as well as to give a thorough revision of the precise in the general and historical articles.

Nearly 1000 pages have been added, and careful preliminary labor, now will characterize a work unknown for carrying it out to a successful termination.

Some of the articles in the previous issues have been made but very page has been entirely or new type forming in fact a new Cyclopædia, which is to be complete as a work of reference, and with a far greater pecuniary expenditure than was at first thought necessary, to have been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge.

The illustrations which are introduced for the first time in the present edition, have been selected for the sake of instruction, and to give greater fullness and force to the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of natural history and natural science, the most various and remarkable features of scenery, architecture and art, as well as the various processes of mechanics and industrial arts. A thoroughly illustrated work, in the most intelligible manner, no pains have been spared to insure the accuracy and completeness of the text, and the illustrations and it is believed they will stand as a monument of the enlightened century of the Typographic, and worthy of its high character.

This work is sold to Subscribers only, payable on delivery of each volume. It will be completed in sixteen large octavo volumes, each containing about 800 pages, fully illustrated with Steel Engravings, and with numerous colored Lithographic maps.

WATER SUPPLY

We republish by request the following report of a Committee of the City Council on the question of a water supply for Bangor:

CITY OF BANGOR, May 27 1874

To the City Council.

The joint special committee raised for the purpose of examining and reporting what steps the city of Bangor can equitably pay per annum to the Bangor Water Company for a full supply of water for fire and all other corporation purposes have carefully considered the same, and beg leave to submit the following report.

We understand the Bangor Water Company proposes to introduce water into the city and to distribute it through a system of street pipes as extensive as at least as our present system of streets, and further we understand they propose to erect a reservoir of such height with pipes of such size and at such sites as that hydrants when we located by the city within the present extent of fire districts may each be of such force and capacity as to throw a stream of fifty feet in the highest part of any building in the city, and to keep the water in the reservoir always at such a height

THE REVIVAL OF TRADE.

(From the N. Y. Times.)

There has been a general impression in commercial circles for the past two months that a very active revival of trade might be expected to fall. We have little doubt this impression was well founded. There are many reasons for it, of a local but general character, which it is unnecessary to recite. The principal reason is to be sought in our own country in the fact that for the past year there has been a general and thorough liquidation of our business and private indebtedness. The panic of last year did make some ugly wounds, and some of the wounds have left ugly scars behind. It was a fearful, at times called alarm, but when the panic found the country on unsound foundations, the work of handling its wounds had been greatly overdone, but there had been no excessive overtrading, no wild speculation, and there did not exist, as in many instances in 1857, a feverish and unhealthy state of things. The result is a decrease in the quantity of food and all the raw materials in the hands of the manufacturing and commercial classes, and the production of these articles is the inevitable consequence of overtrading. When the pressure of the money market in the business world had subsided, and the country was in a condition to meet its engagements, the work of building up was had begun in earnest, and the Autumn of last year, the same may be said. In fact, it was above the average, and the spring of this year exceeded in the same lines of trade in this country. A steady fall in the price of all staples and French manufactures in the result, as it is the natural result of the state of things, has led to a decrease in the quantity of food and

GOD MADE MANKIND

IN A

AN ACCIDENTAL OCCURRENCE.

A hard storm came upon a sick bed lay,
Where all I saw feeble with each passing day,
A hallowing gleam of heavenly peace was there—
Pray of love divine—no book of prayer

But Christian friends, on holiest mission bent,
Came, night and day, to fight—and anxious, went,
Harder and stronger still the strife at grew
The dusty hear no answering solace knew.

Anger at last at such persistent call,
Will from its cell he held them all,
The dumb at sunset came he would not hear,
Shouting words could and no listening ear

"Wife! fetch the blackboard—and a bit of chalk!
One way remains to stop this scoundrel talk,
I will write something which is truth indeed,
And leave it placed where every one may read

The slow, weak hand that scarce the chalk could hold,
Wrote "GOD IS NOWHERE" large and clear and
Which battled sentence met his waking sight,
In bold relief, morning, by day and night.

The original—hours after hour passed over,
While fresh air and sunlight came in from the
Lowered sun, over burned the blistering
And as were yet, the dying pulses

Then—upon large, rested the anxious
And hope arising, leaped, sprang for
For joy with a fulness, a rapture
And Heaven! in a moment, the gift of
Of a further lease of life, for Prayer, and the
